The Council on Foreign Relations’ David Rockefeller Studies Program —CFR’s “think tank”—is composed of over seventy adjunct and full-time scholars and practitioners, called fellows, as well as ten in-resident recipients of year-long fellowships who cover the major regions and significant issues shaping today’s international agenda.

These scholars contribute to the foreign policy debate by writing books, reports, articles, and op-eds on the most important challenges facing the United States and the world.
